County Progress SATURATES the following markets:

County Progress is a great way for county elected officials to learn about county news, legislation, educational opportunities, and best practices from other counties. I especially enjoy being able to learn little-known facts and trivia about fellow county officials that give me more perspective into their backgrounds, experiences, and beliefs. It's a great tool to bring together all 254 counties across Texas!

— J.D. Clark, Wise County Judge

County Progress Magazine is by far the most credible and highly regarded publication in the state related to local government. Texas residents trust county officials to improve their communities and get the job done. County officials trust County Progress to help in achieving that goal.

— Ben Zeller, Victoria County Judge

County Progress is a vital tool when keeping up with best practices around the state, as well as fostering networking with our colleagues. This comes in so handy in our day-to-day decision-making when we see that a friend in another county is working with XYZ contractor or that a friend in a different county is about to embark on a project we've been mulling over; we are able to seek out their advice and guidance. From the small things to the big things, County Progress is one of our first stops.

— Jen Crownover, Comal County Commissioner

County Progress is invaluable to county officials. It keeps us current on legislative activities and provides essential information on how to better run our counties. I keep old copies of the magazine to use as a reference resource.

— Tim Addison, Yoakum County Commissioner
